THE OUTLAW JOCKEYS.

Rough riding is the chief essential of success with the outlaw jockeys. By this crude work in the saddle is not meant, but a willingness to take chances. If Taral, Sloan, Simms, Doggett or any of the stars of the legitimate ranks should go to Singlerly and accept a mount, they would find in their "outlaw" brothers some tricks that would surprise them. They would see their claims to greatness materially lessened, for good horsemanship is really a secondary consideration. It is get away in front, save all the ground you can, and make every post a winning one.

Waiting tactics don't pay. A poor start or a rear position during the early stages of a journey means almost certain defeat. The successful rider is the hustler from flag fall to finish.

Of course, in a driving finish, one of our stars might outshine these outlaw cracks, but it is not the finish where their ability tells. It is in cutting corners and rushing clear of scrammages which are bound to come on a narrow track with sharp turns.

A year ago "Chic" Neel rated as the crack of the outlaw jockeys. At the post he was without question the "quickest" rider this country had ever seen. Jimmie McLaughlin, in his day, was an expert in his line, and many a victory he earned by the advantage gained in the early stages of a race, but this boy Neel excelled him in this particular. No matter what his position might be—outside, inside or in the middle of the track—the fall of the flag found him clear of the bunch.

This winter he seems to have lost all this cunning. He still rides, but his victories are few and far between. Rigby, Narvaez and Cunningham being at present the popular favorites, and they well deserve the consideration of bettors. They divide the majority of the races run between them, and their services are in constant demand.

Cunningham is the most finished rider of the three, and there is little doubt that he could hold his own with the best of his fellows in the legitimate. He is quick at the post, gets his mount into a good position at once, and manages, despite his hustling style, to have a little in reserve for a finish. His seat is good, and can "persuade" with whip and spur to perfection. He hardly knows the meaning of the word fear, and will squeeze through openings that not one in a dozen would attempt.

Rigby's success lies chiefly in this same willingness to take chances. "The shortest way home" is his motto. The instant a start is made hands and heels are used in a hustle for the inside position. He takes great risks in following this policy, but manages to escape with fewer accidents than those who ride cautiously. It is this daring that earns the majority of his victories.

During these days, when the track is full of holes from the recent thaws, he goes on as if the going were perfection. He argues that looking for the bad spots won't help one to find them, and his record certainly makes his arguments good. As a finisher one can not go into raptures over his skill, but from an outlaw standpoint he fills the bill to perfection.

Narvaez comes of a family of riders, and on a good track is probably the best on the circuit. In bad going he seldom accepts a mount, as he does not believe the game warrants the risk, but with a safe track his skill is very much in evidence, and victories are frequent.

A long experience on half-mile tracks has made him expert in cutting corners, or, as the railbirds put it, "he goes round the bend with one leg over the fence." His reputation for honesty is excellent, and when riding he finds a mount in almost every race. Efforts are shortly to be made to have him restored to favor by the American Turf Congress. Clemency in his case would be well applied, as his skill well entitles him to rank among the best of the western riders.

Burckholder and Nostrand rate well among the horsemen. The latter, when in the employ of Marcus Daly, gave promise of developing into one of the best lightweights in the country, but his work on the big tracks last year was decidedly disappointing. His going over to the "outlaws" has worked wonders. While admitting that those he is compelled to contend with are less formidable than those he had been meeting, the improvement in his riding is almost startling. He is all energy, and has won a large percentage of the races in which he has ridden. It looks now as if the legitimate ranks have lost a good rider.—New York Journal.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

Of the eleven yearlings wintering at Mr. Ollie Troutman's farm, seven miles from Lexington on the Nicholasville pike, Mr. Troutman says the star of the bunch is a bay colt by Hanover, out of the good race mare Ortie, by Deceiver. The youngster is the property of S. K. Hughes & Co. The son of Hanover is invariably the pacemaker for his ten companions in their daily romps over a twenty-acre paddock.—The Thoroughbred Record.

Particulars of the racing at San Francisco yesterday were much delayed and hard to obtain, because of the track authorities trying to prevent information being sent out. They have inaugurated a determined effort to break up the San Francisco pool rooms by this means.

Belle of Maywood, dam of the famous sway-back Tenny and of James R. Keene's crack St. Cloud II, now in England, foaled a chestnut colt February 16 that owes its paternity to the "black whirlwind" Domino. Mayhap here is one of the stars of 1900.

Stake events to be decided this week at Ingleside are the California Oaks, 11-8 miles, for 3-year-old fillies today and the Malowansky Stakes, 1-2 mile, for 2-year-olds, Saturday.

The officials of the Maryland outlaw tracks figure it they can run until April 4. How the Governor of Maryland views it has not yet been made public.

Horse owners can obtain entry blanks for the Saratoga stakes by calling at the office of DAILY RACING FORM.

 Start poor. Won driving. The next three were doing their best. Fischer's previous race warranted no such form as he showed today. War Song's race was a bad one. Fedora weakened when the pinch came. So did Congo Dick.
 Scratched—Jack Lovell, 115; Fairmount, 112; Frank R. Harf, 112.

4266 FIFTH RACE—Scant 5-8 Mile. Purse $100. 3-year-olds and upward. Allowances.
